My Disclaimer

You may laugh, but I didn't read a full book until my senior year in high school. Sure, I got a lot of stickers and free pizzas for checking out books from school library, I just never read them.

I've been reading self-improvement books since I read my first book in 1998, How to Win Friends and Influence People. I found it on a table in the school library. I was mesmerized by the title. I was so embarrassed that a friend might see me that I snuck it in my book-bag. Don't worry, I returned it after reading it and I do the honest thing now when renting book from the local Huntington, West Virginia public library.

Since reading my first book, I've read hundreds of books on self-improvement, motivation, success, and achievement over the last decade, learning all that I can. Self-improvement books put me in a hypnotic state of being. They are like treasure maps that show the way.

Still, I don't know it all. That said; please know that I strongly advise you to read books on motivation. I've listed a treasured classic book with each author's quote. Notice that the quote does not necessarily come from the book listed with the author.

If you want motivation, then read this book of quotes and each of the books listed with the authors.

Please sit down a spell to read these wonderful, amazing quotes that will motivate you like magic.
